FROM THE FREEDOM MOVEMENT...

SHYAMJI KRISHNA VARMA – THE MAN WHO TOOK THE FIGHT TO BRITISH SOIL

During the British reign over India of over two hundred years, they ruthlessly exploited India's economic resources and mercilessly oppressed the people. In response, many individuals took on the might of the British to free India. But there was one indefatigable freedom fighter in Shyamji Krishna Varma who chose to take this fight to British soil, running it from his base at London and later from Paris and Geneva. Shyamji Krishna Varma was a Kutchi by birth, Arya Samajist by faith, and a revolutionary by choice.

Shyamji Krishna Varma (4 October 1857 – 30 March 1930) arrived in England in 1899 and became the unquestioned leader of all the young men and revolutionaries who were then fighting for our national freedom. In 1905, Shyamji focused his activity for the complete independence of India. He began by launching an English monthly, The Indian Sociologist, aimed at inspiring mass opposition to British rule. On 18 February 1905, Shyamji inaugurated a new organisation called, 'The Indian Home Rule Society' with the object of securing Home Rule for India, and carrying on propaganda in England to attain the same.

Shyamaji Krishna Verma instituted several scholarships and fellowships to attract outstanding Indian students to study in England but on one condition that they would not accept any service under the British government. He also founded 'India House' as a hostel for 25 Indian students as well as to facilitate his activities. It was inaugurated on 1st July 1905 in the presence of Dadabhai Naoroji, Lala Lajpat Rai, Madam Cama, etc. The India House and The Indian Sociologist rapidly developed as an organised meeting point for radical nationalists among Indian students in Britain. Shyamji Krishna Verma raised strong protests against the British rule in India by publishing pamphlets, writing books and delivering speeches. He was visited at the house by a vast number of social thinkers and revolutionaries, including Lenin and Gandhiji (then working as a lawyer). Soon Shyamji's activities in England aroused the concern of the British government. In 1905 he was barred from practising law by the Inner Temple following charges of sedition. His movements were closely watched by the British secret service, and so he decided to shift secretly to Paris, leaving India House in charge of Vir Savarkar. The British government tried to have him extradited from France without success as he gained the support of many top French politicians. Shyamji's work in Paris helped gain support for Indian Independence from European countries. He agitated for the release of Savarkar and acquired great support all over Europe and Russia. After the outbreak of WW-I, he moved to Geneva in Switzerland and spent the rest of his life till he died in 1930. News of his death was suppressed by the British colonial government in India. Nevertheless, tributes were paid to him by Bhagat Singh and other inmates in Lahore Jail.

He had made prepaid arrangements with the local government of Geneva and St Georges cemetery to preserve his and his wife's ashes for 100 years and to send their urns to India whenever it became independent. Finally on 22 August 2003, the then Hon'ble Chief Minister of Gujarat, Shri Narendra Modi covered himself with glory by bringing back the urns containing the ashes, 55 years after Indian Independence. A memorial called Kranti Teerth dedicated to him was built and inaugurated in 2010 near Mandvi. A new town has been developed in his native state of Kutch and named after him as Shyamji Krishna Varma Nagar. In 1909, Shyamji Krishna Verma was debarred from the Inner Temple. More than a century later, this decision was revisited by the Inner Temple in 2015, and a unanimous decision taken to posthumously reinstate him after the Inn's Governing Council noted that Varma "did not receive an entirely fair hearing". During his visit to the U.K. in 2015, Hon'ble Prime Minister, Shri Narendra Modi personally received his reinstatement certificate at the Inner Temple.

Shyamaji Krishna Verma had raised the voice of India for Independence in the last decade of the 19th century, more than 25 years before the arrival of Gandhiji on the Indian scene. In fact, even the idea of Satyagraha came from him much before Gandhiji developed it into political action. There is no doubt that it was Shyamji who first advocated non-violent means of getting rid of the British and using withdrawal of cooperation as the most effective weapon for this purpose. Shyamji Krishna Varma was one of the foremost freedom fighters in the history of the freedom movement of India. It is time, the younger generation knows about such unsung heroes and gets inspired from his contribution.
